GRACE

“My heart is like a country but half subdued, where all things are in an unsettled state & mutinies & insurrections are daily happenings... I want to deliver my rebel self to God in chains but the rogue puts on so many forms he slips through my fingers... My soul is like a besieged city, a legion of enemies without the gates & a nest of restless traitors within... so that I am deceived & counteracted continually. It is a mercy that I have not been surprised & overwhelmed long ago, without the help from on high it would soon be over with me.”

Nothing so false, so frivolous, so absurd, so impossible, so horrid, but it cannot obtain access, and that at any time, or in any place; neither the study, the pulpit, or even the Lord’s table, exempt me from their intrusion.”
